They've freed up songwriters and demomakers from having to figure out how to mic and record drums with limited tracks, space and budget. And with the advent of the DR660, the Boss drum machine sounded so good that it wasn't thought of as just demo material anymore. Now, finally, we have the successor to that great machine, the DR770. Obviously, expectations are pretty high. Does the 770 live up to its name You bet. It's got all the popular features from the DR660 model, as well as some great new enhancements. The DR770 is Boss's finest compact rhythm machine to date. Amazon calculates a product's star ratings based on a machine learned model instead of a raw data average.

The model takes into account factors including the age of a rating, whether the ratings are from verified purchasers, and factors that establish reviewer trustworthiness. Please try again later. J. Stewart 4.0 out of 5 stars BUT TAKE NOTE The DR770 has a design flaw in that the DEFAULT pedal setting DOES NOT RESTART AT THE TOP OF THE MEASURE. There is a setting that lets you start at the beginning of the beat when you use the pedal but it is a bit tricky to figure out if you are not familiar with the pedal. It took me years to discover this very ridiculous design flaw. But there you go. Try it. It will work. Other than that crazy design flaw the pedal is quite good for a working drum machine. Great sounds and quick access to beats on the fly. But Im wondering how to record over a pattern or song, using a different drum kit than the pattern or song without changing the kit of whats already recorded. For example I was trying to record a simple bass line over a drum pattern, but whenever I select a bass kit the original pattern kit changes to the one I just selected. I tried a few different things I though might work but I dont know. Any help is appreciated, I know its an older unit but Im sure someone here has experience with this in the past, Thanks. You can then modify the pitch and decay for each pad assignment. There are 2 banks A and B of 16 sounds each. Just use the pad bank button to cycle between the banks.
