You can speedily adjust the focus of the bright image. These lenses Nikkor 40mm, Nikkor 50mm, Nikkor 75mm, Nikkor 105mm, Nikkor 200mm, Zenzanon 100mm, Zenzanon 150mm and Zenzanon 300mm have instant reopening automatic diaphragms. With the Model E film back magazine, you can get 16 6x4.5 exposures on the 120 film and 32 6x4.5 exposures on the 220 film. For color pictures, 108 type film is used, while for black and white, 107 type. Back will spring open. Press two knobs together and lift film holder out. Insert empty takeup spool in top and fresh film spool on bottom. If film holder is not yet in position, turn film winder slightly and push film holder again until it snaps into place. Only even numbers will show in the exposure counter window after the number 8 appears. Film winder will become free and the film can be quickly wound up on takeup spool. When winding the shutter, please be sure to keep turning the crank until it stops, even if you hear a sound half way. The sound means the shutter is wound, but the film is not advanced yet. Distance scale provided on helicoid focusing ring shows the distance between the film plane and the object to be photographed with auto Nikkor 75mm F2.8. Footage is shown in red and meterage in white. See focusing distance table for 40mm, 50mm, 100mm, 150mm and 200mm lenses at page 27 or refer to the distance comparison table accompanying each lens. Speeds are set on a single nonrotating selector. Through a special stabilizing device, there is uniformly balanced exposure across the large film area even at high shutter speeds. High quality miniature ball bearings are used. The selector may be set for intermediate shutter speeds as indicated on page 16. Settings may be selected either before or after the shutter is wound.

3 Color Codes of Shutter Speed Selector The red, white, green and yellow colors of shutter dial numbers are color codes for flash synchro photography. Focus the lens and you are now ready to make an exposure. To avoid camera movement, it is desirable to use a cable release when a slow shutter speed is used. This will hold the shutter open. To close the shutter, turn the tip of the button clockwise. If at any time during a roll the pointer has accidentally been set on F, push the free. However there are times when deliberate double exposures may be desired. A. After making one exposure, insert the dark slide and remove the back. Insert gently to full stop. Twist to right clockwise until bayonet lock snaps closed. The interchangeable lens system of the Zenza Bronica Model S2A can be used with earlier model bayonet type Bronica cameras. The following table shows the focusing distances for 40mm, 50mm, 100mm, 150mm and 200mm lenses. It is possible to use the prism finder for eyelevel focusing or the outdoors magnifying hood which is adjustable for individual eyes. The 40 mm wide angle lens goes to 27 cm 0.87 ft, the 50 mm lens to 33cm 1.08 ft, the 100 mm lens to 98 cm 3.2 ft, the 105 mm lens to 1.3 m 4.26 ft, the 150 mm lens to 2. Bronica Bellows Attachment Model 2 in conjunction with the Bronica S2A permits taking photographs up to 1x magnification lifesize with the 75mm lens. Additional use of the extension rings permits photographing at closer distances and therefore at higher magnifications. The range of magnification obtained with various interchangeable lenses is given below. The 40 mm wideangle lens requires 90 mm screw type filters; while the 50mm and the 300 mm, 82 mm screw type filters.

The other lenses 75mm to 200mm lenses can be used with 67mm screwtype filters. The long focal length interchangeable lenses 400mm and over require 122 mm screw type filters.

Please read the instructions before removing or attaching a To attach the strap to the camera, press and hold down the spring plate on the strap metal, as shown in the photograph, and slide the plastic holder toward the strap using the metal protrusion atop the plastic holder. From 1972 it was overshadowed by the Bronica EC, but improved revisions of the S2 continued to be marketed for a number of years before being officially discontinued in 1977. This mount could focus lenses with focal lengths from 40mm to 200mm; longer lenses have their own helicoids either separate or integrated and can be mounted to the bayonet. The bellows accessory also uses the bayonet to mount onto the body. Mirror lock down feature is no longer available. The film back has also been improved; now with the capability to accept 220 roll film, the choice of 120 or 220 is selectable with a small dial on the film back. The shutter must be cocked before each shot by cranking the film winding lever. Many who used the system for the first time are often a bit too careful when using the film advance knob. One needs to advance the knob typically 3 to 4 complete rotations or multiple smaller rotations until it feels like it stops then rotate a bit more until you hear the shutter cock. This sounds is often very unnatural and feels like something broke. Film backs are removed from the camera by inserting a dark slide and pressing it firmly into the slot. As a safety feature, the shutter will not fire if the dark slide is not removed. Because all of the camera functions are fully mechanical, no battery is needed. A similar version called Bronica C2 was also available, with a nonremovable integrated back. Its specifications and outer appearance are nearly identical to those of the S2. The main difference is an improved film advance gear mechanism, reputed to result in fewer jams. The film advance and cocking dial has been changed and is smaller than the previous version. CB, CC and CD ring.

The Bronica S typically has a advance knob with a silver crank and a nonremovable focusing helical. The S2 has the PC flash connector on the shutter knob side of the camera body. The base of the Bronica S by the shutter button has the mirror lockdown button, not found on the S2. The wooden palettes are lit with a single HMI.
