With the number of crime attempts that happen daily worldwide, no doubt that kind of business will always be in demand.

So hiring the right people and then creating a robust security guard training for your new and existing security officer's manpower — is the guarantee of their great service, the results of which you will see in your business revenue. Many security jobs only require a GED and a clear criminal record. While at the same time the position is one of power. The security guards of tomorrow are techsavvy, assertive, and able to make tough decisions in highpressure situations. If you want your security guards to be ready for modern challenges, perform at a high level, deliver excellent customer satisfaction, and also pass government regulations then there are no two ways about it you need a security guard training program, today. So, consider this guide as your easy button. Simply read and follow the steps and suggestions to create and set up your very own training program for your security guards. Then use the references in the final section, coupled with the below steps and suggestions, to build your own training program. So, step 1, start creating your training program by defining the vision mission statement. It's not an emotional appeal for action but a target to aim at. A good vision statement makes clear the 1 solitary thing that 100% of all effort goes to. The action was taken that fulfill that mission statement is a win. Those that do not is a failure. Start by creating a training requirements document. Stating those regulations and their requirements would be a good place to start your training requirements document TRD. Especially, if your guards are armed. If you would, then it would make sense to partner with a training provider whose certification and licenses are considered an industry standard. Do you want your officers to come in off their jobs into the office, and take a day out or more for training. Consider the cost of such a program and if that cost makes economic sense.

That's why leading companies are switching to online training, preferably delivered through mobile apps so officers can train onthejob or at their preference. But, even if it does, that doesn't mean you can't do it better for less. Your TRD should include a curriculum. If your training program is just meant to comply with regulations then it's simple enough to find reference material for coursework without too much effort. The manual is available online and you could download it to a mobile training app and have your guards complete it from anywhere, at any time. Most apps will also keep records of completion that you are required to maintain for two years. You don't want your officers to be accused of profiling so sensitivity training can be very important when working in a multicultural environment. At least, at the manager level. You're already a step ahead. Make them a part of the conversation and decisionmaking process. In fact, training is a cyclical process and their experience in the field can help you improve and keep your training up to date and relevant. First, business requirements. Second, government regulations. And, third, employee desire. These factors are important because, collectively, they define the environment in which the training development is currently taking place. Terrorism has increasingly reached the shores of countries that, before, did not experience frequent terrorist attacks. For security officers, this is more than a news headline, it has a direct effect on their daytoday operational environment. However, any training program put together in 2020 should consider the above factors. It's a must for the new century. This new breed of security guard brings a lot more value to the customer, which, for security companies, means higher billings. Technologically skilled professional security officers are already a necessity. They bring added value to the customer, in the form of advanced and quick problem solving, that much is clear.

Turning the job description from a deadend job to one with a promising career path. If you do the math that comes out to Win, Win, Win. There are several apps capable of delivering coursework on mobile phones and receiving reports on progress and success rates. The really good ones also make the process very easy, simple, and fun. But, you already know that. As noted above, if anything changes, technology will likely be behind it. Technology is already changing the industry by taking a significant portion of violence and crime online, which has created a whole new division of security called cybersecurity. These concerns will likely be reflected in new regulations and reforms required by security officers. That's why flexibility is imperative in any training program you implement. Once changes are made to the program, they need to be distributed to the workforce quickly and enable you and them to comply with regulations. When creating a security guard training program, you're going to need to jump over a few hurdles first. Heck, you might not be entirely sure you want to take this on. You can expect to deal with some push back as you try to move forward, and here's how you can deal with the most common causes. You may be thinking "This is not an excuse, we really don't have the budget to create a training program". But, what if I told you that companies that have a formalized training program have 218% higher income per employee! The same companies also enjoy 24% higher profits than similar companies in the same industry that don't have formalized training. Research by DDI demonstrates that training increases operating income by 52% and improves productivity by 81%! As it turns out, training is one of the most effective things that a company can do to increase productivity. IT won't like me for telling you this but cloudbased software has made a great deal of their job redundant. IT no longer needs to be the gatekeeper between you and new technology.

Some are so simple to use that you can upload your training program to their platform in less than 30 minutes. The really exceptional ones will provide ondemand support to help you complete the process. That being said, setting up a new training program for your company can be a daunting task but it doesn't have to be. As you go along, you'll undoubtedly find room for improvement so address those when the timing is right. How With technology, of course. But, not only that, if you want to make changes to your program, cloudbased software lets you do that pretty much from anywhere at any time. Now it's time to fill up your structure with content or coursework. We're not recommending you copy and paste this because your needs may not be the same as that of these programs. Instead, use them as an inspirational guideline that you can improve upon and match to your needs based on the topics discussed in the previous sections of this post. Also, you're going to want to update some of these programs for 2020. Manitoba law requires at least 40 hours of training. The manual claims to cover all important areas of basic training. It includes a list of objectives for the unit, pretests, glossary of terms, quizzes, and other tips and pointers. The main purpose of this guide was to standardize the level of professional requirements of security officers across the European Union. At 41 pages, it's the shortest among the three. It focuses on minimum training requirements so it's a good place to start, especially if you're based out of Ontario. However, there's one thing you can't stop time. As time goes by, the security industry changes with it to adapt to new requirements, challenges and regulations but also to make room for new technology that can and will make security companies more efficient and productive. The best way for you to generate value for your customers is to have maintained and developed a highly qualified and capable security force.

After all, it's what your customers expect. So beat the competition by having the best workforce on the clock. Getting started is easy and free!. B2B SaaS, Tech and Ecommerce marketing, being responsible for industry research, business development, and content writing. Through his 360 experience, Denis learned that both small businesses and huge corporations share 3 same key challenges and struggles Revenue Growth, Market Competition, and Employee Management. Security guards are generally governed by legal regulations, which set out the requirements for eligibility e.g., a criminal record check and the permitted authorities of a security guard in a given jurisdiction. The authorities permitted to security guards vary by country and subnational jurisdiction. Security officers are hired by a range of organizations, including businesses, government departments and agencies and notforprofit organizations e.g., churches and charitable organizations. This term was carried over to North America where it was interchangeable with nightwatchman e.g., security guard until both terms were replaced with the modern securitybased titles. Security officers are sometimes regarded as fulfilling a private policing function. Security officers are not required to make arrests, but have the authority to make a citizens arrest, or otherwise act as an agent of law enforcement, for example, at the request of a police officer or a sheriff.
